INTRODUCTION.

THIS smaller edition of "Some Feudal Coats of Arms" will, it is hoped, place the contents of the Rolls of Arms, with the accompanying illustrations, within the reach of all who are interested in early coat armour and in the uplifting of the Art Heraldic.

To the manuscript references for the Rolls of Arms, I have added the names of books, in which printed versions will be found.

As the mode of differencing arms in feudal times is of considerable importance, I have included Chart Pedigrees of Astley, Fauconberg, Le Strange, Nevill and Venables, each of which affords some interesting examples. But I would call especial attention to the pedigree of Geoffrey de Mandeville and his kinsfolk, which I have reproduced on page 162 from the Chart compiled by Mr. Round, and to which I have added blocks of the arms. It is by an historical example such as this that we realise how clear and precise is the language of Feudal Heraldry.

Then, a differenced coat was evidence of actual affinity by blood or perhaps of connection by marriage; now, a coat of arms is so adroitly differenced as often to be a colourable and shameless imitation of an ancient one to which the grantee has no other claim nor pretence than an accidental similarity of name; such a modern coat is evidence of nothing more than a vain imposture. From simple truth the language of Heraldry often degenerates in these later times to the language of Ananias.

A good friend kindly sends me "The Boast of Heraldry," which appears on pages vii and viii. It is so singularly apposite that I am constrained to print it for the edification and perchance the entertainment of my heraldic confrères.

For the frontispiece to this volume, the excellent representation of Prebendary Percy's beautiful effigy in Beverley Minster, in all probability our finest example of Ecclesiastical Heraldry, I have to thank Mr. Thomson Foley, Architect, of that town, who has specially drawn it for this edition.

"THE BOAST OF HERALDRY."

Well do I recollect that distant day
When I was taught the Elegy of Gray
And learnt by heart through many a grudging hour
"The boast of Heraldry, the pomp of Pow'r,"
My wont to sit in boyish discontent
And wonder wanly what on earth it meant;
Nor do I find, though older I have grown,
That I can call much clearer views my own.
I know, of course, that pomp of Pow'r implies
A vast importance in one's own two eyes,
Importance which, too vast at least by half,
Is apt to make less potent persons laugh;
But Providence not yet vouchsafes to me
To know what is this "boast of Heraldry."
Is it, I ask myself, a secret cult,
Taboo unto the average adult;
A thing to whisper of with reverent air,
And lock up in some dim, recondite lair;
A thing to hide from ordinary life
"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife"?
Is it a weird and occult branch of knowledge
Confined to favourites of a fee-famed College?
Is this to claim the sole and secret stores
Of mysteries which the man of mind ignores—
Stores which, unlike some others, fail to give
A service civil and co-op'rative?
Or is this Heraldry the private prey
Of each and every callow F.S.A.?
Tell me, ye shelves of Bloomsbury, Bodley, Queen's,
Rich fields wherein the student freely gleans,
Stored with those royal muniments of old
To Heralds trusted and by Heralds sold,
Can these things be? And must the man who seeks
To bring it rescue from the grip of cliques
Prepare himself to face fierce Magazines
Intent to smash him into smithereens,
And must he find himself upon the brink
Of raging torrents of vain-glorious ink?

Must he, because he is no myrmidon,
Become a target for the hanger-on
And note the angry and anonymous
Attentions of a new-laid arquebus
Aimed from some grim Barronial mausoleum
By Ancestor or eke by Athenæum?
May he not ever seek to sift the wheat
From out the chaff of Queen Victoria Street,
Or pierce the obscuring crust that ever hardens
Upon the tumid tomes of Whitehall Gardens,
Or dare to doubt the dictum of a sage
Who decorates Archæologia's page,
Or mention e'en with modified aspersions
Th' "originality" of "spurious versions," *
Without the feeling that behind his back
There is developing some brave attack
From those who try to further private aims
Without appending their illustrious names?
Must he in humble wise lay bare his breast
To fangs from Burlingtonia's "Viper's Nest," †
A nest still smarting from its sad bereavement,
The loss of Mowbray's fabulous Atchievement? ‡
Is this, again I ask, what is to be
The oft-repeated "boast of Heraldry"?
If it indeed be so, I gravely doubt
If Heraldry has much to boast about!

PREFACE.

"SOME Feudal Coats of Arms" is primarily a collection, from the Heraldic Rolls, of the names, with the personal insignia displayed on their banners or vestments, of the combatants at the battle of Falkirk, 1298, and at the siege of Carlaverock, 1300, at the tournaments of Dunstable in 1308 and 1334, at the battle of Boroughbridge, 1322, or at the siege of Calais, 1345–8, and before Rouen, 1418. With these have been incorporated the names and blasons in the so-called Heraldic Rolls or Lists, some of which I have re-named (see page xx et seq.), concluding with the Arundel or Military Roll, emblasoned circa Hen. VI.

How far these Heraldic Rolls or Lists were compiled from originals and added to by Heralds or Herald-painters of later date must remain a moot point. Of those which are generally accepted as contemporary with the persons whose arms are blasoned therein I may at least refer to the Military Rolls before mentioned, 1298–1418. The copy of the Dering Roll, which is considered to be the earliest of the Rolls assigned to the reign of Hen. III., agrees to a remarkable extent with the Howard or Planché Roll. The Ashmole copy of this same Dering Roll, No. 1120, made by that notorious Elizabethan Herald Ralfe Brooke (when Rouge Cross, 1580–93), is by him recklessly described as "the names and armes of those Knightes as weare w^t^ Kinge Richard the firste at the assigge of Acon or Acres," 1191 (see Black's Ashmolean Catalogue), another noteworthy instance, I am afraid, of the malpractices displayed by the officious Elizabethan Heralds, secure in their re-incorporation of 1555. For the convenience of the student I have distinguished the majority of these "Dering" blasons by a double dagger, ‡; and those interested in the Roll will find a short article thereon in the "Reliquary," vol. xvi. p. 135.

Probably the most interesting of the series, Historically and Heraldically, is the Boroughbridge Roll (1322), still in the possession of the family of Colonel Williams-Wynn, of Coed-y-Maen. Other original Rolls, of my period, are rarely to be met with; in the British Museum is the Camden Roll, and a third, the Bodley Roll, is in the Ashmolean Collection at Oxford, No. 15 (A). The Society of Antiquaries boasts of one or two "Originals," admittedly spurious versions of older Rolls,* reprinted in the "Archæologia." Traced facsimiles of the Boroughbridge and Camden Rolls will be found on pages xviii and xix.

As is the case nowadays their compilers are to be caught tripping—in the Boroughbridge Roll the arms of Sir Edmond and Sir Geoffrey Cornwall are correctly assigned to them, but the same arms are also ascribed, though erroneously, to Sir Edmond and Sir Geoffrey Curteny. Other slips have been detected in the Falkirk and Carlaverock Rolls, even the simple coat De Vere was a notable stumbling-block to the early armorists. A volume of facsimiles of these Rolls which have all been edited and printed, some many a time and oft (the Parliamentary Roll half a dozen times), would be more welcome to the Heraldic student who is unable to consult the originals than a réchauffée, on modern-antique lines, with which we seem to be threatened.

* See "The Boast of Heraldry," preceding page.

In addition to the Roll authority for each coat, the Christian as well as the Surname of its original holder is here given, information not to be found in any of the printed Books of Arms; the blasons and tricks of the various Rolls—the foreign coats usually excepted—have been collated and the whole alphabetically arranged, as in my other works. The voracious hack-editor of kindred works will doubtless calmly appropriate, "out and out," for any new edition of his armoury what I have arranged at infinite pains, in precisely the same way as all the original matter in my Peerage, and more especially in my Baronetage of 1880, was appropriated in 1881 and later years, without a breath of acknowledgment, unsuspected and therefore unnoticed by their reviewers and the public.

Annotation or identification was no part of my original plan in producing a series of blasons referring for the most part to well-known persons of ancient repute, the identity of whose coat armour has hitherto been carefully obscured in the published armouries, in perpetuation of the occult—and the inexact. In order to minimise repetition it will be noticed that I have combined under their respective names those who are named at Falkirk, 1298, and at Carlaverock, 1300, and those who sealed the celebrated Letter from the Barons to the Pope, 1301. Those who accompanied Prince Edward (E. I.) in the last of the crusades, 1269–70, are distinguished with a cross, †; the Dering Roll (‡), which is (sceptically) said to refer to the siege of Acre, 1191, has already been mentioned. The asterisk denotes those whose descendants are singled out by Mr. Shirley in "Noble and Gentle Men of England," and those (Shirley) names whose ancestors do not occur in these Rolls are included in square brackets, so *[ ] Shirley. For any who wish to annotate further much valuable information may be readily found in (1) the alphabetical section of the "Parliamentary Writs," by F. T. Palgrave, and in (2) the "Seals in the British Museum," published by the Trustees, under the editorship of Dr. de Gray Birch.

As "Hungry time hath made a glutton's meal on this Catalogue of Gentry" I have compiled, for ready reference, a somewhat tentative list of those named on the Rolls who are still represented in the male line. These families are in very deed the Ancienne Noblesse of this realm. See page xxv.

Perhaps more remarkable still is the exhaustion of the lineal descendants of the Knights of the Garter, for of all those (about 270) created before the reign of Henry VIII. only 13 are now represented in direct male descent.

(1) Lord Wrottesley represents Sir Hugh Wrottesley, a founder, 1344; a unique distinction.
(2) Marquis of Abergavenny, K.G., represents John, Lord Neville, of Raby, 1369.
(3) Lord Clifford of Chudleigh represents Sir Lewis Clifford, 1378.
(4) Rev. Robert Myles Stapylton, Rector of Lolworth, represents Sir Bryan Stapleton, 1382.
(5) The Earl of Derby, K.G., represents Sir John Stanley, 1405.
(6) The Earl of Shrewsbury represents John, Lord Talbot, 1424 (1st Earl of Shrewsbury).
(7) Simon Conyers Scrope of Danby represents John, 5th Lord Scrope of Bolton, 1461.
(8) The Earl of Huntingdon represents William, Lord Hastings, 1462.
(9) The Duke of Norfolk, K.G., represents John, Lord Howard, 1472 (1st Duke of Norfolk).
(10) The Viscount Hereford represents Walter, Lord Ferrers of Chartley, 1472.
(11) The Earl of Stamford represents Thomas, Marquis of Dorset, 1476.
(12) The Duke of Beaufort (c. 1490) and (13) the Duke of Leinster (1504) represent the creations of Henry VII.

My interest in the art side of Heraldry (so little appreciated), derived to some extent from my relative, the late Birket Foster, has led me critically to investigate and examine, for the best examples, a host of Heraldic MSS. in the British Museum, which contain the work of the older Herald painters; and I trust that my critics and supporters will agree that my labour has not been in vain ; indeed, I shall be well pleased if this work but afford a starting point for future enquirers. How often, alas ! has a manuscript suffered by its change of owner, exquisite tricks all but obliterated by the coarsest daubs of colouring, so much so, that the ordinary consultation of a MS. for aught but the art-Heraldic would probably fail to reveal the artistic gems beneath. The chief among modern Heraldic art students was, without doubt, the late Mr. James E. Doyle, examples of whose exquisite work may be seen in "the Official Baronage." The late Frater Anselm, of Mount S. Bernard Abbey, greatly enhanced the attractiveness of my "Peerage and Baronetage," 1880–3. Of what is now the old school of Heraldry Mr. John Henry Metcalfe alone remains, his delicate physique, as with Mr. Doyle and Fr. Anselm, precluding continuous work ; the drawings of the arms of the Oxford Colleges, made for "Alumni Oxonienses," quite fifteen years ago, are his.

It may also appear singular that a work such as this, dealing with the beginnings of Heraldry, can be compiled quite outside the College of Arms,* and without the assistance in any shape or form of a Herald or Officer of Arms. That the period covered is prior to the incubation of the College is an insufficient retort, the fact really being that the older Heralds, having sold their books of arms and pedigrees, which are now in the British Museum and elsewhere, the present Heralds are largely indifferent to this early period ; moreover, is it not ultra-official, and therefore outside the pale of easily-gotten fees?

"It is recorded by W. Segar, Somerset, afterwards Garter, that 'Cooke, Clar. made many profitable Visitations, both by hymself and his deputyes, whoe, notwithstanding they were well entertayned, feasted and richly rewarded by the gent of y^e^ cuntrey, hath left no memory of them in the Generall Office. These were upon deceasse attached by arrests, alienated and sould. Two Norroys Kings of Armes, two Windesors, Richmond, Lancaster, Somersett and Yorke, deceassed, have done the like to the great sclaunder and decaye of the office and officers present.'"—Cott. MS. Faustina, E. I., fo. 263.

I frankly appeal in this work to those who belong to our old families, or who take an intelligent interest in the history of our ancienne noblesse. My standpoint is the very opposite to that of those who seek to foist on the newly-armigerous person a "nobility" obtained by him in return for a cash payment. Nothing I know could be more grotesquely repellant to those to whom I appeal than this debased attitude, this absolute levelling of the claims of ancestry and high breeding in order to complete a business deal. Surely in the times in which we live these efforts to exalt the novus homo because he has paid fees to the heralds as not only the equal of all, but actually the superior of some of our old territorial families, whose social position is undoubted, and whose history is entwined all through the centuries with the story of their country, calls for an official protest, and invites the publication of such a work as this, in which those who are descended from our older houses will at least have heraldic justice.

The toil in such a work as this is as nothing to the pleasure which is evoked, as one Heraldic milestone after another is passed ; and with an enthusiast, is not the fait accompli his sole reward? I boast no publisher, nor sponsor in any shape; as with the "Alumni Oxonienses," the costs as well as the toil are wholly mine, but even so, without outside aid, I could never have produced this book in its present form. It is my most agreeable duty gratefully to acknowledge the very highly valued privileges and assistance I have received officially from Sir Edward Thompson, Director of the British Museum, from the Keeper of the MSS., and the chiefs of the Reading Room. For literary help and guidance I have been almost hourly indebted to the ever courteous Mr. F. B. Bickley, of the MSS. Department, whose knowledge and experience of ancient documents are probably unrivalled. My thanks are also due to Dr. Birch, whose unsurpassed Heraldic knowledge has ever been available and of the utmost value in clearing up many abstruse points. It is indeed difficult to avoid being invidious where all are so uniformly courteous and helpful.

Even though 'tis "forty years on" since the appearance of my first Genealogical work, and I have been responsible for many volumes in the interval, I must still claim indulgence for errors, which, in spite of every care, I feel sure must have been committed, as any one who knows aught of the babel of blazon will most readily understand and condone. Let me at least pray to have been delivered from the snare of the forger.*

HERALDIC INTRODUCTION.

CONFUSION of the symbols and devices of the ancients with Heraldry as an exact system has led to much aimless discussion as to its origin and history, and also to much vague theory, as if, forsooth, Heraldry were really an occult science.

Surely in the nature-worshipper we detect the Heraldic protoplasm, the primeval king of arms. He it was who painted the object of his veneration on his skin as a charm against the evil one when at peace, and on his shield in defence of his person when at war; the presence or whereabouts of his chieftain or tribal head he distinguished by a standard, ensign, or banner, as all writers testify, from Moses downwards; in this simple statement may not the Heraldic prototype be surely discerned? Further down the ages it may well have been the bards of every clime who handed down in turn these mystic emblems in their own weird way, inventing as they went the almost forgotten chimera and other monstrosities which were calculated to strike terror into the hearts of the adversary. Later still, the vases of the Greeks (550, 500 B.C.) are eloquent in examples of the Hellenic equivalent of our Heraldic system.

Passing over the quasi-Heraldic aspect which some attribute to Totems and other personal distinctions so commonly employed among nations of imperfect civilisation, I may instance the usage of the Celtic tribes of Gaul and Britain who carried symbols or badges on their shields. Their national symbol the boar—occurs on one such shield, found in the river Witham, and dates from the beginning of our era, see "Archæologia," xxiii. 95, and the larger edition of this work.

The symbols of the Normans, at the Conquest, represented in the much-debated Bayeux Tapestry next claim our notice. Mr. Fowke, the latest historian of the Tapestry, recites at length the opinions of Bolton Corney, M. Thierry, Dr. Lingard, Mr. Freeman, and many others, with whom he agrees in regarding it as a contemporary work, but in no way associated with Queen Matilda, though probably made under the orders of Bishop Odo by Norman workpeople at Bayeux for their church of Bayeux.*

Of its pre-heraldic devices I may, perhaps, be allowed to quote Mr. Fowke's own words :—

"As a nearer approach is made to the ages of Chivalry the realistic representations of natural objects give place to those of geometrical figures which were soon systematized as ordinaries, whilst the animals assume the more conventional form in which they were subsequently borne. Thus the place of the wild beasts is taken by crosses, roundles, or besants, interlacing bands, and simple tinctures, and this stage is most clearly shown in the tapestry. We do not here find any particular or distinguished person represented twice as bearing the same device ('Archæologia,' xix. 188), and we must therefore conclude that they are not intended to represent the arms of any individual, or only in some cases and that appropriately, but their representation at all, of course, implies the existence of a system of bearings by which the wearer was known. And this we gather also from Wace, who says—

* See The Bayeux Tapestry: a Description and History, by Frank Rede Fowke, first published by the Arundel Society in 1875, under the sanction of the Science and Art Department of the Committee of the Council on Education, and secondly by George Bell & Sons in 1897.

'E tuit ovent fet cognoissances
Ki Norman alter conust
El ke l'autre portuer neuet.'

These were cognizances to distinguish one Norman from another, and no man dared to use another's—showing that the assumption of arms was not the subject of mere caprice.

With the spread of Feudalism, then, came the introduction of the linear, or geometrical, and from the imaginary per pale, per fess, per chevron, per saltire, &c., would naturally be evolved, the pale, the fess, the chevron, the saltire.* Out of this fortuitous combination of some of the elements of Euclid with the objects of the nature-worshipper, sprang that system we call Heraldry.

Although there is evidence that Heraldic bearings were assuming a definite form in the reign of Stephen (1135–54)† it is not a little remarkable that Richard I. is the first English king who is known to have adopted an heraldic bearing. On his great seal (1189) he bore the two lyons for the Duchies of Normandy and of Poictou or Maine. In his second great seal (1198)‡ he added a third lyon for the Duchy of Aquitaine, or, as some say, for Anjou; this has since been our national arms of dominion; according to Sir Henry Spelman ("Aspilogia," page 67), the earlier kings of England had marks and tokens painted on their shields, which they altered at pleasure. In this connection it would be interesting to know on what authority, if any, Brooke, York Herald, described the Dering Roll as "the names and armes of those Knightes as weare w^t^ Kinge Richard the firste at the assigge of Acon or Acres," 1191 (Ashmole MS. 1120).

Early instances of these symbols or badges are generally found on standards or banners, and it is worthy of note that in the Crusade of (2 and 3 R. I.) 1191, Richard "had a standard of y^e^ Dragon which he delivered to Peter de Preaus to beare notwithstanding y^t^ Robert Trusbut chalenged y^e^ carrying thereof as his hereditary right" (Ro. Hoveden, fo. 397, n. 10).

"These symbols or badges were not only borne on shields, but were also paynted on silken surcotes worne over their shirts of mail" (and also upon the caparisons of their horses). See the Arundel or Military Roll and seals. "But these surcotes of silke, being at firste made wide and girt close to them at ye waist, did, by reason of their pleates, oftimes confound the marks so paynted on them, which being discerned they were afterwards made straight and plaine, so that ye same marks which stood eminently to be seen on the shield was also as visible on the surcote both before and behind, and being thus depicted on them gave ye first occasion of calling them cotes of armes" (Stowe MS. 662, fo. 16).

Does not this defect of the early "pleates" supply a clue to the origin of many of the variations in Heraldry? The appearance of a plain fess or a plain bend on a standard would vary, according to the point of view or the strength of the breeze, from different directions; it might suggest, even if it did not appear as, undée, wavy, or dancettée; add to this the proclivities of each arms painter, or the momentary illusion of, say, an engréle for a lozenge, fusil, dancet, indent, and even a mascle, and their evolution therefrom may be readily accounted for. In Cole's copy of the Parliamentary Roll occurs the ominous note of warning, "Take Hede of his wordes endented and engrayled, and examine such cotes with older Presydents." Nor must we omit to mention the cross moline, patonce, patée and flory, which are often confused, or imperfectly drawn, by the Herald-painter. So with the cross moline, cercellé and recercellé, which are equally confounded in blason and in trick; even crosses crosslet are often drawn as crosses botonnée in early tricks, probably because it was easier so to do. In a less degree the bend, bendlet or baston, the quarter and the canton, fret and fretty, flory and florettée, often represent the caprice or indifference of the Herald or the Herald-painter of each particular roll. So, too, whether a mullet had 5 or 6 points, pierced or not, whether a label had 3 or 5 pendants; and yet the theory has gone forth that the label of three denotes a son, and that a label of five denotes a grandson.

Perhaps a more interesting feature of these early Rolls is the quaint Norman-French blason; I specially except such illiterate jargon as obtained under the Gartership of the two Dethicks, and of some succeeding kings-of-arms. The rising generation of Heraldic editors, whether of a Family Armorial or of a County History, hardly seem to justify the "out-of-the-mouths-of-babes-and-sucklings" theory by their eagerness to adopt in lieu of universally recognized formulæ the A-B-C of the "Accedens of Armoury." With equal intelligence might they rehabilitate the author of "Little Jack Horner," and present him to their admirers as the superior of Rudyard Kipling.* But, to be serious, who will solve the blasons of Berkeley and Cromwell in the Boroughbridge Roll or reconcile the "wyfers" (wiure, or, viure), which occur not only in the arms of Benhale and of Crek, but also in the arms of Sir Edmond de Mauley; for Meyrick, in the "Archæologia," vol. xxxi. page 247, unable to resist a thrust at the expense of the Heralds and their College, supposes the "wyfers" to be vipers' nests! evidently by confusing viure with guiuré. "Tertoleres" in Criel, "voyderis anabeles" in Dolerd, "p'my" in Constable, Dacre and Raynsford, "amptie" in Wellesby, or the "temoyles," "feuilles," "mailles," &c., of Bosville, are also curiosities in their way and worth consideration. The "undée en lung" of the Boroughbridge Roll and "ounde de longe" of Jenyns' Roll seem to have bifurcated and become sometimes palets nebulée, and at others the modern emasculate wavy, in lieu of the bold undulating lines of the old tricks. In this connection the blason of Theobald de Valoines suggests further complications. The "chevron et demi," of Strecche—"une barre et demi" of Twyford, and "une fees et demi" of Pipard, suggest the accommodation of the size of a repetition of charges to artistic effect, 2 chevrons or 2 bars to be equal to $1\frac{1}{2}$.

An early instance of a quarterly coat occurs in the Falkirk Roll, 1298; the coat of Sir Simon de Montagu quartered with Monthermer, which may be considered coeval with the oft-quoted coat of Castile quarterly with Leon, borne by Eleanor, Queen of Edward I., who died in 1296.

The last point to which I will here refer is the ancient practice of adopting the arms, though not the name, of an heiress, and with the further object of drawing attention to this interesting point I append the few instances that occur to me of old families who do not bear the arms of their original paternal family:

Abney assumed Ingwardby; disallowed to Lord Mayor Abney (1701), Harl. MS. 6179, fo. 66.
Congreve assumed Campion.
Coles assumed Knightley.
Croke assumed Blount.
(Croke claimed male descent from Blount.)
Fleming assumed Hudleston.

* See "Archæological Nomenclature," Literature, Nos. 194, 5, 6, July 6, 13, 20 (1901).

Harpur (Bart.) assumed Rushall.
Hesketh (Bart.) assumed Fytton.
Leigh assumed Lymme.
Lumley (E. Scarborough) assumed Thwenge.
Prideaux assumed Orcharton.
Stanley (E. Derby) assumed Bamville.
Wallop (E. Portsmouth) assumed Barton.
Wrottesley (E.) assumed Basset.

Contemporary with the early Rolls of Arms are the Seals of the Barons who signed and sealed the famous letter to the Pope (12 Feb. 1300–1) on his pretensions to the crown of Scotland. These hundred seals present the earliest and most authentic evidence of the armorials used by the Barons of England in the fourteenth century, or perhaps in the thirteenth century. From the plaster casts in the British Museum it would seem as if many of the seals had been engraved by the same man for the very purpose of this sealing; that used by John de Hastings, lord de Bergavenny, is supposed to be hypothetical, or perhaps a very early example of the fictitious in Heraldry; that of Brian FitzAlan is not heraldic, and that of John de Botetourt is of the nature of a badge or heraldic emblem, while Edmond de Hastings evidently adopted for the occasion the territorial or baronial arms (?) of Drummond, encircling them with a Hastings legend. The majority of the shields are of the triangular or heater shape. William Paynell affords the earliest example of arms on a lozenge, and Robert FitzPayne bore his arms on an oval shield. On fourteen seals, those to whom they belonged are represented on horseback in complete armour, but only three of them—namely, Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster; Ralph de Monthermer, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford; and John de St. John—are represented as bearing crests on their helmets. The first named was of the blood royal; the second married Joan, the King's daughter, widow of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, &c; the last named, John de St. John, had distinguished himself in the wars of Gascony, France, and Scotland, and was therefore in high military repute. From this fact it is supposed that the bearing of a crest on a helmet was originally limited to those connected with the blood royal, or of the highest military renown, and was in effect the precursor of a much greater honour, eventuating in the Order of the Garter itself. See the "Archæologia."

"These great commanders in the wars in France and Scotland, who held of the King in capite, had numerous tenants who served under them, and, for the regular marshalling of their marks and badges, had each a peculiar Herald to ascertain that each (tenant) had a full and clear distinction from the other. These heralds had their titles either from some of the great seigniories belonging to the crown or from those unto whom they were retained." See also the "Complete Peerage," by G. E. C., vol. ii. p. 270, note b.

Notwithstanding these precautions some heraldic improprieties seem to have occurred subsequent to the battle of Agincourt, for in 5 Hen. v. it was proclaimed that "all such who had taken ye liberty of wearing cotes of armes in any former expedition where neither they nor their ancestors had ever used any were thenceforth prohibited y^e^ farther enjoyment of them unless they could produce a title thereto by Grant from some person who had authority for that purpose, excepting those only who had been with that warlike King in battell of Agincourt (1415), did then bear them in that memorable service." Close Roll 5 H. v. (1417), in dorso m. 15.

ROLLS OF ARMS

INCORPORATED IN THIS VOLUME,

With references to British Museum Manuscripts, in which they are either tricked or blasoned, and to printed works in which they have already been printed; based on the lists given in the "Genealogist," Volume V.

The maladroit naming, by former editors, of many of these Rolls has led me to substitute Arden, Arundel, Ashmole, Howard, Norfolk and Surrey, for such names as Charles, Military, Planché, Powell, Walford and Willement—my regret is in not having carried substitution still further.

T = trick. (B) = blason. (C) = coloured.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

The Times.—"Mr. Joseph Foster has given us for the Middle Ages a work of reference, the usefulness of which no one will deny."

Spectator.—"Labour so disinterestedly undertaken deserves a substantial reward, and we hope that the titled and untitled nobles of the United Kingdom will take care that Mr. Foster does not miss it."

Literature.—"It has a distinct value for students of both heraldry and genealogy."

Saturday Review.—"We welcome Some Feudal Coats of Arms as a work of art."

Academy.—"This latest stone of the monument which the indefatigable Mr. Foster is building to his own heraldic fame is as prodigal of record as an Assyrian brick."

Notes and Queries.—"His work has profound interest for all who indulge in the study of heraldry."

Vanity Fair.—"The Bayeux Tapestry supplies a quaint running accompaniment all through the pomp of the pages, where shields and seals and effigies, curious and beautiful, make glad the heart and the eyes of the student."

The Speaker.—"A work which tends to revive the fame of English heraldry . . . the great atchievements are magnificently rendered."

The Guardian.—"We wish it to be distinctly understood that this is a good book. Mr. Foster has produced a work of real interest and of permanent value."

Annual Register.—"Some Feudal Coats of Arms is a work of marvellous industry and erudition."

The Standard.—"Mr. Joseph Foster has compiled a volume of singular value to the student, as well as of great artistic charm. . . . It would be difficult to praise too highly the skill, care, and artistic taste with which the book has been prepared."

The World.—"So far as we are able to form an opinion of the work, it is one of conspicuous merit as regards both design and execution."

Morning Post.—"With rare enthusiasm for an ancient art, Mr. Foster has been at much pains to investigate the old heraldic Rolls. . . . As a work of reference for those interested in genealogical inquiry or heraldic study, the uses of the book are obvious."

Daily Chronicle.—"Altogether it is a very remarkable work."

The Daily News.—"Mr. Foster gives us an admirably compiled and profusely illustrated work."

The Record.—"We can imagine no more interesting volume. . . . Mr. Foster's patience and care as an investigator and chronicler are familiar to all who work in his fields, and his devotion deserves the warmest recognition."

Pall Mall Gazette.—"Some fine full page examples of many quartered atchievements."

The Westminster Gazette.—"Mr. Foster may claim to have produced with infinite care and loving pains a most admirable and attractive book."

Tatler.—"Mr. Foster has been a very laborious worker in the field of Genealogy, for it is over forty years since his first genealogical work appeared."

The Field.—"The coats of arms, the copies of the different brasses and the seals, are as beautiful as art can make them, and the author is to be complimented on having produced so magnificent a work."

Journal of the British Archæological Association.—"Mr. Foster has not stinted anything, and the result is a reliable book."

The Irish Times.—"A monument of research. Splendidly reproduced facsimiles of early armorial seals."

The Observer.—"A handsome volume, full of interest for students of heraldry."

The Scotsman.—"Turning to his book, we may say that it is in many respects delightful and admirable."

APPRECIATIVE COMMENTS BY SUBSCRIBERS.

Your handsome volume Feudal Arms is richly illustrated, and I am glad to see our effigies and brasses so well utilised . . . the facsimile tricking of Arms from Rolls, Visitations, &c., is an immense advance on the ordinary heraldic books, and most valuable for the correct representation of charges. It must have been a heavy labour to collect so much original work.—DILLON (Viscount), President Society of Antiquaries.

. . . A most beautiful volume that I would have paid any price for ten years ago—nothing can be more valuable and helpful than your collection of early and sound work.—P. L.

I have since been enjoying this very beautiful and most useful volume, for which all who care for armoury should owe you a debt of gratitude.—F. P. BARNARD.

I cannot refrain from letting you know how exceedingly I admire your Feudal Coats of Arms, both in the manner in which the work is produced, and from the evidence of great and careful research which must have been made.—W. D.

I opened Feudal Arms as soon as it came, with the intention of only just giving a glance at its contents until I had more time to examine it, but spent two hours before I realised how time was passing.—T. F.

The volume is handsome in its get up, but more than that, the contents are of extreme interest, and the book is much appreciated here.—U. H. CRUSE (Librarian), The Leeds Library.

Your learned book, Feudal Coats of Arms, safely to hand.—ARUNDELL OF WARDOUR (Baron).

Your beautiful book.—THE PRESIDENT OF QUEEN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD.

I must write you a line to say how delighted I am with my Some Feudal Coats of Arms. It is really a splendid book, and what it means in research is beyond one's comprehension.—G. R. PRIDEAUX-BRUNE.

I have seen nothing to equal your Feudal Coats of Arms.—C. B. LYSTER.

The book has come, and I like it very much, I think it a wonderful performance.—WINCHILSEA (Earl).

I have been examining your work, and the more I look into it the more I wonder at your great industry, and the book is charming. The illustrations are far beyond anything I expected; it promises me a great deal of pleasure.—C. E. HAIG.

A most charming book, and we are all (even Dorothy, aged seven) in love with it already.—S. STAKES.

Feudal Arms arrived safely, and I beg to offer you my congratulations on the magnificent work you have produced. All students of heraldry owe you a deep debt of gratitude. It is difficult to imagine how one pair of hands could have accomplished so much, and it speaks volumes both for the marvellous industry and for the brain which guided them.—L. GERALD DILLON.

The facsimile reproduction from the Boroughbridge Roll, and indeed all the other plates in the book, seem to me admirably executed.—A. W. WILLIAMS-WYNN.

Your magnum opus has come, and promises many a happy hour for me; also, I hope, a delight to many others in the days to come.—(Rev.) E. G. PUNCHARD.

It is a grand book.—(Sir) R. P. EDGCUMBE.

Your last fascinating book.—J. L. LAMBE.
